My Teaching Philosophy

I believe that an education is one of the greatest gifts someone can receive. It can allow for someone to gain fruitful knowledge that will benefit them for the rest of their lives. A good education requires good teachers. To be a good teacher, I believe that it is necessary for myself to truly care and want the best for my students. It is my role to do everything in my power to set them up for success in life and attend to whatever needs that I can help them with. I need to be a positive role model for my students and hold myself to a higher standard so that they can learn by my example. I need to be transparent on what I expect from my students and how I plan to help them succeed. I will design my curriculum in accordance to the standards in a way that is flexible enough to meet the needs of every student in my class. I will not create confusing and sloppy assignments or tests that will not benefit the student's academic progress. I will listen to the needs of my students and make sure I can make accommodations that might help them with their schoolwork. I think it is important that I make the classroom a safe and positive learning environment by not yelling or singling out my students. I plan on always being kind to students, even when they are being disruptive. I will set expectations for my students to follow so they will behave and learn well in class. I believe that I am an understanding and compassionate person who will make the classroom experience for my future students as beneficial and enjoyable as possible. I will always give my all for my students so they may attain a successful and fulfilling life.
